URGE SCHOOLS TO SUPPORT SEAL SALE

SALT LAKE, Nov. 11.—Urging support of the Christmas seal sale conducted by the Utah Public Health association, the state school office yesterday sent out a letter to district school superintendents.

"You already know that most of the money received from the sales put on by the association in the past has returned to us through the labors of the association," the superintendent wrote. "You recall that Dr. E. G. Gowans, state supervisor of health education, resigned last July, and we are endeavoring, through the Utah Public Health association, to receive some help in carrying on our health program. An excellent school nurse, employed by the association, will devote much of her time to our work. You see, therefore, that we will get direct assistance from the money which goes into the health bond sale, as has been the case formerly."

"It is to be hoped that you will assist in the campaign and see that excellent results are assured."

EUREKA SHIPMENTS GAIN DURING WEEK

EUREKA, Nov. 11.—Compared with last week's output of 14 carloads, a total of 156 carloads of ore was shipped from the mines of the Tintic district for the week ended yesterday.

THEATRE BLAZE STIRS MEMORIES

Old Timers Hate to See Bowery Playhouse Pass From Sight

By JULIAN EDWARDS
Special Correspondent of The Standard-Examiner.
(Copyright, 1922, by The Standard-Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Already they are clearing away the charred and water soaked debris which in the remains of the two-alarm fire early this week in the Miners' Bowery theatre. There are a large number of visitors, who surprisingly enough, have in the past few days gone to look at the smoke-grimed front of the Italian melodrama and movie house.

More surprisingly still, however, the visitors seem not so much interested in that. They speak of Edwin Forrest, of Harrigan and Hart, of Maggie Mitchell and Maggie Cline and Louis Lane, who became Mrs. John Drew, of Mr. and Mrs. John Gilbert, of Fanny Wallace, Rozina Shaw.

Indeed, the conflagration which brought two sets of apparatus hot-foot to the battered playhouse half hidden beneath the Bowery elevated started the conflagration which has developed into a veritable bonfire of reminiscences among theatre lovers everywhere.

TENDER MEMORIES

It's not long ago that the old Bowery theatre was in its prime. Yet not so long ago that mothers and fathers, our grandmothers and grandfathers went thither in private coach or barouche to see John Fletcher in his blonde wig as "Hamlet" or Julius Brutus Booth in "The Last Days of Pompeii"; nor was it so long but that the old timers who still live around the Bowery can tell yet—and how! this spot was the cradle of the American stage.

"Ah, this was the greatest place," they declare. "In the days when everything was below Fourteenth street. Not so many years back either." It was here Chief Kenton himself, dashing down town in response to the second alarm that reproved a bystander who wanted to know why he seemed to take such a personal interest in saving the many structure. The chief smiled his wise smile.

"It'd be sort of hard for us old timers to see this place go. We are growing a little jealous of our old landmarks."

"Getting sentimental, chief?" he bystander inquired.

"Go home and ask your father, son," the chief replied.

ACTRESS HISSED AWAY

When the nineteenth century was in swaddling clothes, smart New York paid 50 cents a box seat, while less smart New York paid 25 cents for a seat in pit or gallery and grumbled at the cost.

The audiences were not always forgiving. And in those days, before eggs, tomatoes and apples were in the jewelry class, an impatient audience was something to be reckoned with—and dodged. There was the night when Mme. Francisquy Huttin made her debut in America as the first exponent on the American stage of the modern school of French dancing. In view of the follies of Isadora Duncan, and of mankind in general, if not of womankind, it is difficult to believe what happened. When the French woman leaped from the wings in her abbreviated ballet skirts, there was a storm of hisses. Before the dance ended, all the ladies in the lower tier of boxes left the theatre, with a fine switching of hoopskirts, for this was in the year of grace, 1887.

They rang down the curtain on a bewildered and furious danseuse, nor was she permitted to dance there again.

SUDDENLY SMITTEN

Yet nine years earlier nobody hissed at Mme. Celeste. It was Mme. Celeste's custom to be discovered as the certain rose in romantic and scanty male attire, somewhere near a turret with a bow and arrow in her hand. Her grace was so appealing that when Henry Elliott of Baltimore first saw her from his box, his friends twitted him on his hopeless infatuation.

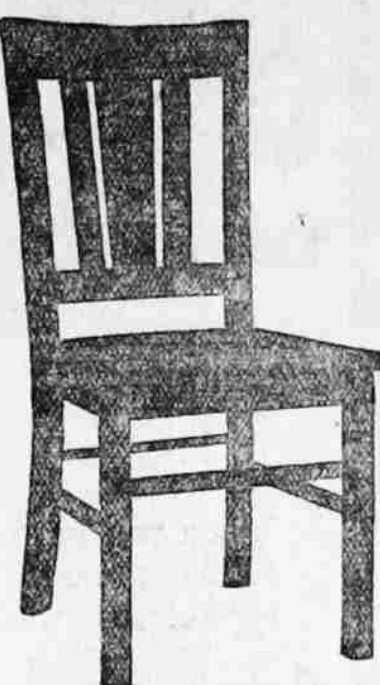

"What do you mean, hopeless?" he said, in effect.

"I bet you $500 I marry her within the month," which he did.

U. S. SECRETARY REBUKES BRITON

Author Who Said Yankees Were Crooks Can't Address Cadets

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Brigadier General Stuyden, commandant of the military academy at West Point, has been directed by Secretary Weeks to recall an invitation given to John Porteus, president of the Royal Historical society, to address the cadets on Armistice day.

A formal statement issued Friday by the war secretary said the reason for his action was found in statements contained in a recent book written by Porteus entitled, "British Statesmen of the Great War." The secretary quoted this passage:

"Americans esteem a good bargain, even if gained by dishonorable means, to mark the highest form of ability. The United States cannot engage in any form of competition with us, from athletics to diplomacy, without using foul play. They must win, if not by fair skill, then by prearranged trickery or violence, if not by open negotiations, then by garbled maps and forged documents. There is the fact. It may be unpleasant but it cannot be denied."

"An author entertaining these sentiments," Mr. Weeks said, "is not considered to be a proper person to address the students of a government academy."

WARD CONFERENCES TO BE HELD TODAY

BODIES DUG UP IN POISON CASE

Three of Five Exhumed Are Ex-Husbands of Accused Woman

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—The bodies of two men and a woman believed by the authorities to have been the victims of poison were exhumed for examination by the police and Coroner Peter Hoffman Friday on a criminal court order after chemists declared sufficient poison to kill several persons had been found in two other bodies already exhumed.

Three of the five bodies that have been exhumed are those of former husbands of Mrs. Tillie Kilmek, whose fourth husband, Joseph Kilmek, is in a hospital recovering from poison which he says was administered by his wife. One body was that of a former husband of Mrs. Nellie Sturmer Kulkik, said to be a neighbor and a relative of Mrs. Kilmek, while the body of the woman is that of Mrs. Rose Chudinski, a cousin of Mrs. Kilmek.

Charges of murder were placed against Mrs. Kilmek and Mrs. Kulkik by the police and Mrs. Kilmek was booked for attempted murder, and Mrs. Kulkik as an accessory in connection with the poisoning of Kilmek.

REPUUDIATES CONFESSION. Mrs. Kilmek was arrested after her latest husband had been taken to a hospital and had charged that she had given him poison in his food. In an alleged confession to the police which she later repudiated Mrs. Kilmek said she had put a "white powder" in Kilmek's food and had obtained it from Mrs. Kulkik. Mrs. Kulkik told the police Mrs. Kilmek said she wanted the powder to kill rats.

Acting after the receipt of anonymous telephone messages and letters stating that former husbands of the women had been poisoned, the authorities exhumed the body of Frank Krupczyk, third husband of Mrs. Kilmek, who died April 15, 1921, and Wojcik Sturmer, former husband of Mrs. Kulkik who died April 15, 1918. Chemists who made an examination of the bodies declared there were traces of poison in each instance.

CARRIED INSURANCE. The bodies exhumed Friday were those of Joseph R. Mitkiewicz, Mrs. Kilmek's first husband, who died January 13, 1914, John Ruszkowski, her second husband, who is said to have married Mrs. Kilmek a month after her first husband's death, and who died May 20, 1914, and the woman who died suddenly March 22, 1922, after dining at Mrs. Kilmek's home, according to the police.

According to the police, all the former husbands of the two women carried insurance at the time of their deaths and all were stricken after partaking of elaborate feasts.

VILLAGE ESCAPES ELECTION UPROAR

LONDON, Nov. 11.—(By the Associated Press.)—While most of the towns and districts in the British Isles are in the throes of electioneering and citizens have daily to listen to and read the utterances of the various candidates on the stump, there is one spot in the kingdom where the ordinary routine of life is more important than electioneering. This is the Scilly Isles.

Where nobody is ever heard talking politics, where there are no posters, and where elections never cause excitement. The cable from Pensance being out of order perhaps assists the prevailing calm, but it is recorded that in the last election the polling booth at St. Martin opened at 8 o'clock in the morning and the officer presiding sat five hours before any one appeared. He hopes that things will live up this year, but with only 50 voters on the register he is likely to have a quiet time.

CONFERENCE TODAY FOR OGDEN STAKE

Palace Gardens MADE BIRD REFUGE

LONDON, Nov. 11.—(By the Associated Press.)—King George has granted permission for the use of part of the spacious gardens of Buckingham palace as a wild bird sanctuary.

The committee recently appointed by Lord Crawford to consider the establishment of bird sanctuaries in the royal parks suggested among other places the ground of Buckingham palace and, with the king's permission, is already established as a bird refuge.

Other recommendations included spots in Hyde park, Regent's park and Richmond park, hoped by establishing such refuges to induce the return of various wild birds to London. One of the problems in connection with the treatment of the menace of cats and rats, and while measures are being taken to exterminate the squirrels, residents will be expected to keep their cats at home.
